RAID, CAPTURE AND GRILL SIX ITALIANS FOR PALMERO DEATH

ALL NIGHT SESSION AT POLICE STATION AS FOREIGNERS ARE SWEATED FOR KNOWLEDGE OF CRIME.

TOOK WIFE AND FATHER

Mrs. Palmiero, William Broski, Three Boarders and Another Italian Subjected to Severe Test.

Figuring to the exact hour exactly a week following the murder of Ralph Raffles Palmiero as the psychological time to swoop down on the Janesville Italian colony and gather in once again those foreigners who stood out most prominently in the case, a police raid last night gathered in six, and for hours afterward at the police station they were grilled without mercy.

It was two hours past daylight before the first left the police station, the second, then it was done away with immediately. Not a knife or revolver was found last night. A double-barreled shotgun was found at a hospital, and a 32-caliber shell, but Palmiero died from bullets from .38-caliber shells.

No papers or letters of any kind were uncovered.

Palmiero, in December, 1915, purchased a .35-caliber automatic pistol for his wife. In August this year he bought a .32-caliber automatic for himself. Mrs. Palmiero explained their disappearance with a wave of her hand and he, sold them for money in Chicago.

Highwayman Dies Unidentified at Racine, After Being Shot and Mortally Wounded By One of His Victims.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Racine, Nov. 3.—After being shot and fatally wounded with his own revolver, as a result of a desperate fight with one of the two men whom he attempted to hold up last night on the west side of the city, a highwayman, aged about 30 years, died a short time after being taken to a hospital. His identity was not known.

The man was conscious up to within a few minutes of his death, but in response to all questions begged to be left in peace, saying he had nothing to say. Please let me die.

George Sibido, one of the two men attacked by the stranger, was being relieved of his valuables when he was killed. Steve Rondone, by a quick movement, grappled with the robber, and after a desperate struggle secured possession of the latter's revolver. The highwayman then took to flight with Rondone in pursuit.

After firing four shots Rondone, in turning a sharp corner, lost his man momentarily, and later found him lying in peace, suffering from a bullet wound just below the heart. Physicians, who were rushed to his assistance, found the bullet had pierced the man's back, penetrated his body and emerged just under the heart.

A laundry mark in the robber's shirt gives the name Clancy, and police officials believe the man comes from Milwaukee, and that he was wearing the stamp of merchants in that city.

DEMOCRATS BLAMED FOR HIGH PRICES

WITHOUT PROTECTIVE TARIFF HIGH COST OF LIVING WILL CONTINUE, DECLARES HUGHES.

PROMISES WERE VAIN

Instead of Reducing Cost of Living, They Reduce Chances to Make a Living, Republican Candidate Charges.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Hudson, N. Y., Nov. 3.—In a speech here today Charles E. Hughes made the tariff his chief theme and assailed the Democratic party for its failure to reduce the high cost of living.

Eloquent With Promises.

"I think they were just as eloquent in promises four years ago as they are today," Mr. Hughes said. "As I look back to the statements made at that time with respect to what was going to be done by Democrats for American labor and American business. You would have thought at that time that the sun of promise had just begun to shine upon a bright world and that they were going to have an entirely new condition in which labor would profit to the utmost and American business would get an extraordinary incentive."

"They told us, for example, that there was the high cost of living. Well, we all knew that. We had very intimate knowledge of that fact, but what they told us to do was to reduce it and that if we would only put them in high cost of living was going to come down. Through a division in our ranks, which I am glad to say has been happily healed, they had a chance to do what they could do with this high cost of living."

Still Have High Prices.

"That robust companion, however, has become more and more robust and seems to thrive on Democratic administration, and is mounting higher and higher, and what we consider the power they were going to come down. Through a division in our ranks, which I am glad to say has been happily healed, they had a chance to do what they could do with this high cost of living."

While they did not reduce the cost of living, they were able to reduce the cost of living. They did not promise that; they promised quite the contrary. They had a wonderful program, and today we are going to reduce the cost of living, they were going to provide for the people of their government through their tariff system. They were going to increase opportunities for business and they were going to have American enterprises, as they said, take on a new size, size and speed and have opportunities for American labor multiplied."

If the ruling price difference remains, more Canadian wheat is likely to come here, said Hoyt Woodward, of a large elevator concern.

RAILROADS PUZZLE OVER ADAMSON LAW

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Chicago, Nov. 3.—E. P. Ripley, president of the Acheson, Topeka & Santa Fe railroad, addressing members of the City club here today, let it be known that the legal talents of the railroads still are in a quandary as to what the roads should do with regard to the Adamson law.

"Nobody knows what the Adamson law means, or how it can be applied to existing conditions," said Mr. Ripley. "Nobody pretends to construe it, and the best legal opinion is to effect that it cannot be construed to be a legal and binding statute. This means that if the railroads try to enforce it, because it would seriously reduce the earnings of a large part of the best and highest paid men."

If, on the other hand, the railroads refuse to have them do so, namely, taking the hot end of the poker in every case, it would cost them a large sum estimated at $100,000,000 a year.

No one can tell what the outcome will be. The law will be tested, and probably will find itself in the supreme court of the United States modified by an act of congress before its effective date.

PLOT TO DYNAMITE SUBWAY STATIONS FOILED BY POLICE

Arrest Six Men, Former New York Street Car Company Employees, One of Whom Is Said to Have Confessed.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

New York, Nov. 3.—Plots to dynamite two stations on the Interborough Rapid Transit company's subway system were thwarted, according to police, by the arrest today of six men, several of them strikers, charged with bringing dynamite into the city and causing a dynamite explosion with the intent to blow up the station on October 24. A confession which detectives say they obtained from one of the men under arrest, sets forth the station at 58th and Broadway was to have been blown up today, and the station at the city hall later.

Watch Dynamite Factory.

Several of the prisoners, according to the police, appeared at the powder factory at Kenilworth, N. J., yesterday, and purchased fifty sticks of dynamite, one hundred caps and one hundred fuses. Detectives were watching at the factory as the result of a clue obtained during an investigation of the explosion last month. Central park at the time bore the name of Kenilworth company as the makers.

James A. Murna, a former subway guard, and Thomas J. McQuire, a chauffeur of Midway, N. J., visited Kenilworth yesterday and purchased the explosives to have been used in today's explosion, according to the police, and Murna and James J. Higgins, a former elevator guard, it is charged, purchased the dynamite in Kenilworth on October 23.

Union Men Arrested.

Murna, McQuire and Higgins are under arrest, together with George Pollock, a former elevator guard; Lawrence Kulle, a former subway guard; and Benjamin Harrison, a former elevator guard. All of these men except Murna, the police say, are members of the district Local Amalgamated Association of Street and Electric Railway Employees.

Police Captain George Bush, who headed the squad said that evidence had been uncovered that funds to finance explosions came from the union, and that other arrests would be made.

The executive committee of the district plot plotted in a Harlem assembly hall, the alleged confession said, one speaker stating that dynamiting the city had been successfully used during strikes in Albany, Buffalo and Philadelphia.

The latter, according to the complaint, was taken with Klein to Baltimore, the two, the banker believed at the time being under arrest. The authorities are looking for the woman.

The advisability of making further foreign loans is being urged. The total of foreign loans made in U. S. since outbreak of the European war is placed by the bank at $2,138,257,637 of which $136,400,000 has been paid off leaving a balance of $1,981,857,257 loans outstanding.

MURDERED IN DESOLATE RIVER LODGE

UNKNOWN MAN WITH $200 IN CLOTHING FOUND MURDERED IN CAMP HALF MILE BELOW YOST PARK.

IS STILL UNIDENTIFIED

Body Taken From River Last Night and Late This Afternoon Man is Still Unknown to Morgue Visitors.

DO YOU KNOW THIS MAN?

AGE—Possibly 28.
HEIGHT—5 ft. 8 inches.
BUILD—Slender.
FACE—Broad.
HAIR—Dark, wavy, to Golden.
COMPLEXION—Light.
EYES—Brown.
HANDS—Uncoloured.
FINGERS—Short, stubby.
SHOES—Size 7.
SHIRT—Size 14 1/2 or 15.
TROUSERS—Waist 36 in.
TROUSERS—Leg length, 30 inches.
TEETH—Perfect (no fillings).

At 3:30 o'clock today the murdered man was still unidentified at Beloit. He is being viewed by hundreds. As during last evening many claim to have seen the man about Beloit lately, but no one was able to give definite information to Chief of Police Quaiman or Detective Jack Diamond which would lead to identification.

Another brutal and fiendish murder mystery today confronts Rock county authorities. Crime, paralleling the slaughter of the Italian section gang foreman, Raffles Palmiero in the yard of his home in this city a week ago last night, presents itself as a baffling problem for county, Janesville and Beloit officials to unravel.

An unidentified man, under the withering fire of unknown assailants, fell with his body riddled with five bullets in a lonely camp two and a half miles above Beloit on the west bank of the river. Then he was dragged from the building to the river bank thirty feet away and heaved over the embankment and into the river, where a heavy stream was running upon him to prevent him from floating away.

The corpse was found about 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon by Henry Fairbairn of Beloit.

Robbery Not the Motive.

Robbery was not the cause for the crime, it was then a large sum of money was overlooked. In the watch pocket of the trousers was found two hundred dollars, twenty-five dollars in bills. Nothing else was found from a hand. A number of common matches was found in the clothing. Nor a mark was on the new suit of clothes, the brand name shoes and socks. The brand name of some underwear was on the clean shirt. He wore. The maker's or dealer's label had been torn from the neckband of the shirt. The suit was a popular brand name. The underwear was selling at seventeen dollars. The shoes were heavy but cheap.

The body was exceptionally neat and clean. It was found in a clean and shiny condition. The man came to his death and the hair had been trimmed simultaneously, it appeared.

The remains were ordered taken to Beloit by Coroner R. Frank Ryan after a conference with District Attorney Dunwiddie, Sheriff Dell Chamberlain and Chief of Police Quaiman of Beloit, when it was decided that a body identification would be greater there than if the body were brought here. Along with the corpse went the camp building door and a pair of canvas boots, which were found in a large box, but no print appeared.

Five Hundred See Body.

At least five hundred people viewed the body at the Meehan mortuary parlors last night. At least half a hundred declared that they had seen the man before and in him recognized a person who hung about Beloit just recently. Clear store and hotel room proprietors were called in, but none could tell who it was.

Coroner Ryan swore in a jury last night and after the men had viewed the body and the wound it was stated that it was probably the inquest would be held either today or tomorrow, but that a body identification was a possibility.

Detective Jack Diamond of Beloit, in the meantime since he solved the Fowler-Walvig murder mystery, is attached on the case. Detective Chamberlain also been assigned and it may be that District Attorney Dunwiddie will engage another detective.

Henry Fairbairn, the man who first informed the authorities of the presence of the remains in the river, tells two peculiar stories. His first one was that he came along the north bank of the river hunting ducks yesterday afternoon. Arriving at the camp for some reason he peered closely into the bushes which grew at the water's edge and saw a body lying low. He saw a shot and what he thought was a knee above the surface of the river. Dropping his shotgun he picked up a fish pole from the bank and prodded in the mud, and his startled discovery. Seeing the corpse he said he procured a boat, crossed the river and telephoned Coroner Ryan and Sheriff Chamberlain.

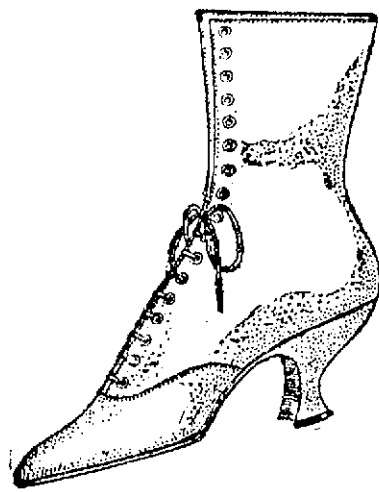

Tells Peculiar Story.

Fairbairn's second story, which was given in the evening, was that he claims to have heard shots fired the night before. He thought the next morning at that time as it was well along in the evening. The next morning he was still thinking of the firing and unable to restrain himself longer he walked from his home, about half a mile from the camp, to the place.

Fairbairn claims to have seen the trail in the grass from the building to the water's edge, and knew at once that a murder had been committed. So that a murder had been committed. He thought from that time as it was well along in the evening. The next morning he was still thinking of the firing and unable to restrain himself longer he walked from his home, about half a mile from the camp, to the place.

FIVE SHOTS IN MAN FOUND MURDERED IN CAMP ABOVE BELOIT

longer to stand the strain he went to the river bank and found the body. Bert Van Alstine, who lives about three quarters of a mile down the river and on the interurban line, said last night that his wife had heard the shots about 8:30 o'clock the night before. Beloit physicians who were called in to examine the body by Coroner Ryan, said that life had been extinct for about twenty-four hours.

Visit Scene of Tragedy.
After the county officials left Janesville, in answer to Fairbairn's call, and motored to Beloit, they were forced to take a motorboat trip up the river to the camp. It is one just being built by George Brandt and Fred Slinger, Line City plasterers. The building, about 20x15 feet, is built of cement blocks. Brandt and Slinger erected the structure on Sundays and at odd times. The side-walls and roof were completed but only the joists for a partition buckled out the interior into two rooms had been placed.

It was evident that a fight had occurred in the room which was built on the river bank and brought to Beloit, was a bullet hole at just the height from the bottom to correspond to where a bullet entered the victim's breast.

Both county authorities and police reason that the man took refuge in the cabin and that as he pressed his body against the door to shut out his assailant the latter fired through the panel, hitting the victim almost squarely in the chest. It is the theory that pushing back the door, wedged by the body, he entered and as the murderer backed out of the door, striking him first in either forearm and then in the abdomen, when he fell to the cement floor mutually wounded. The shot, it is believed, came as the man lay sprawled on his back. Squared in the forehead and in a perpendicular line above the nose, a struck him dead. An angle from above it showed through the skull at the front and emerged but an inch from the top of the head.

Two pools of blood in the southeast corner of the building showed where the man fell. Then, half a yard away, was a third, and from it to the doorway was a wide, dark stripe along the floor, showing how the body had been first grasped by the foot, turned on its side and pulled a short way, and then grasped more firmly as the murderer backed out of the door and across the grass a distance of thirty feet to the embankment.

A few feet above the body as it rested in the river water was found. One belief is that the murderer, after throwing the corpse over the bank, climbed down and with the tool at hand, buried the body. A large stone held down the dead body, partly covered with dirt and sand.

Another opinion is that after getting the body into the river the murderer, after having thrown the body, had fallen into a deep enough water either to carry it down stream or to carry it into the heavy willow growths lining the bank for a long distance down stream. This speculation, however, seems to be offset by the fact that the stone was found on the body.

Find Clothes on Bank.
The man's coat and vest were on the river bank and in this some hold that robbery was really the motive, and that the fact that the man kept his roll of bills in the watch pocket of his trousers was overlooked by the murderer. They figure that the pants were searched and then the coat and vest taken off and gone through. Not finding the money in either the dead man's shirt was opened from the neck to the waist to see if the bills had been concealed inside, they say. This was the way the shirt was found when the body was removed from the water. The back left pocket had been turned inside out.

At the Meehan undertaking parlors the large roll of ten dollar bills was discovered just showing from the watch pocket. The belief is that they worked upward in handling as the body was being taken from the water and transported to Beloit.

Dei Chamberlain counted them out, twenty brand new ten dollar bills, but a day before new and crisp as bills coming from the treasury department.

District Attorney Dunwiddie held that the man was contemplating a journey. The presence of the new

To Study Finger Prints.
The bloody fingerprints on the door and the casing were to be photographed today by Frank Lamphear, night sergeant of the Beloit police department, who has made the capture of criminals through the use of fingerprints. From the large number of prints will be possible, but the prints are not yet taken. The prints are from the fingers of the murdered or murderer. It is thought that this can be determined by taking prints from the fingers of the dead man, which was to be done today by Lamphear.

The jury was sworn in at 9:55 p. m. It is composed of Beloit men: Rudy Jensen, William Burger, Michael Mitchell, Thomas Maling, Michael George and B. A. Anderson.

Purpose of History.
He who reads history learns to distinguish what is local from what is universal; what is transitory from what is eternal; to discriminate between exceptions and rules; to trace the operation of disturbing causes; to separate the general principles, which are always true and everywhere applicable, from the accidental circumstances with which in every community they are blended.—T. Timely Home-Gardening Hints Series

PLANTING BULBS OUTDOORS.
Washington, D. C., Nov. 2.—The first frost, which will put an end to the development of many of the flowers in the home garden, should be the signal, says specialists of the United States department of agriculture, for the planting of bulbs of the tulip, hyacinth, narcissus, which are to be planted in the first frost of color for the outdoor garden in the spring. The bulbs may be put in even before the appearance of the first frost, but better not until after.

Tulips and hyacinths should be placed in beds in light, rich soil that has been dug to a depth of at least ten inches. They should be set four inches deep and five inches apart. If the bulbs are to be planted in the garden, the soil should be prepared in the same way, but the top should not be deeper than twice the length of the bulb.

planting bulbs formally in beds, is to plant them in scattered groups on the open lawn or in the edge of shrubbery. A good plan in arranging for the location of flowers on the lawn is to broadcast the bulbs and plant them where they fall. A small hole five or six inches deep should be made and the bulb inserted, pointed end up. The hole should be pressed full of soil. Often the narcissus, planted in this way, will become naturalized on the lawn and will continue to grow there indefinitely, coming up year after year. If the tops are left uncut until near the first of June. Where the lawn is kept cut, the tops of the plants are cut off before the bulb has a chance to develop for the next year's blooming, though may survive a year or two but become weak and poor after the first or second year. Crocus bulbs may be planted in the lawn in the same way, but the top should not be deeper than twice the length of the bulb.

KEEPING US OUT OF WAR.
"May it be respectfully pointed out to a president who is said to have kept us out of war, that the American officer killed in the military occupation of San Domingo, is just as dead as if he had offered up his life on the bloody parapets of Verdun? Does war cease to be war when it is waged against an incomparably weaker state, or avoided by cringing disavowals when the adversary is strong enough to take care of himself," says an exchange.

"So far from keeping us out of war, Mr. Wilson has blundered into every opportunity of the kind on the peaceful American continent. As for the European conflict, the credit for keeping us out of the war belongs to the British and French diplomats and Kaiser Wilhelm. It was to the interest of all parties to keep us out of that war. Even our equivocal president did not dare to clasp the bloody hand of Germany though he may have felt himself strong enough to make war on poor battered Belgium. For the sake of the German-American vote, whatever that may be, he was equally afraid of giving the allies that moral support to which a just cause is entitled.

"The Mr. Wilson has twice made war in Mexico, and it makes no difference that his method was as thoroughly inefficient and senseless as the rest of his administration. He is making another war in San Domingo and is no doubt reeling himself at it, as he is being called something or other by the press. He is doing what one of his predecessors, who can be imagined to be turning in his grave every night in these times. Mr. Wilson believes that a dog may be said to have five legs if you call its tail a leg. Mr. Lincoln did not believe that, but the uplift of humanity has made him a saint since his time, especially in the last four years.

"Neither side desired the co-operation of the United States in the great conflict in Europe. Belligerents differing in everything else, were in complete agreement on that point. The season is obvious. None of them could afford to sacrifice the one remaining great free market, which the enlistment of our strength on either side might have restricted on either in some measure destroyed. This men were being removed, through no effort of Mr. Wilson, he could valiantly turn the arms of this republic against the negro republic of Haiti. There he had found a foe man worthy of his steel."

WASTE OF WOOD.
A government forest service bulletin just issued says there are asked annually 36,000,000 cords of wood in the form of staves, shavings, sawdust, etc. To the man who is paying high prices for lumber or fuel, this seems enormous. Also much of this might be made available for paper-making in this time of shortage.

Is this another case of the wasteful American spirit? Or is it a result of high cost of labor? The men who are running lumber industries should be able to market any available product. If they are burning up this material to get rid of it, they must consider it of too little value to pay truckage and freight to markets.

It does cost everlastingly to get any kind of work done. Marketing a waste product might perhaps seem to pay, but it might not be possible to get it done, simply because no help could be had. American born men are getting above such primitive operations as lumbering. They want jobs in factories and stores. That leaves the lumberman dependent on foreign help, which is now scarce.

The printer who is paying an enormous price for his paper looks longingly at this figure of wood products that he can't get. More of it could be made available for newspaper use. If after the war paper materials are going to continue somewhat scarce, it will be up to science to find ways of saving and utilizing material formerly thought worthless.

America is wasting resources, and great reservoirs of material for all arts are being depleted. Careful and economical methods will be needed and will pay. Fortunes have been built up in many lines by elimination of waste. There are such rewards for men who can figure out better utilization of by-products of lumbering.

HUGHES THE MAN.
"We have heard in recent days that the alternative of the policy of the present administration is war. I think the alternative of the policy of the present administration is peace with honor."

In this pregnant sentence Charles E. Hughes replied to President Wilson's suggestion that unless the democratic party were returned to power the country would be plunged into war. Mr. Hughes made his reply at the Union League club meeting in New York, and was wildly applauded by a distinguished audience, including Theodore Roosevelt and William H. Taft.

"Elect me again, or the country will go to the dogs," is the Wilson argument. "Nobody knows how to keep the country at peace except myself."

To such a plea is Mr. Wilson reduced by the smashing attack of his opponent.

"Anything to keep out of war," is the Wilson cry.

"Peace with honor!" is the retort of stalwart Americanism, voiced by Charles E. Hughes.

"Peace by weakness" does not sound well to American ears. "Peace by strength" is better.

America was not compelled to buy peace. Its moral strength was sufficient to obtain respect for its rights.

If that strength had been bravely exerted by a stalwart American president.

Americans are tired of the argument that they can maintain peace only by yielding something as vital as peace; some right or dignity that belongs to the nation. Why not have peace and honor? Why not maintain American rights as well as American peace?

A statesman like Charles E. Hughes can do this. Woodrow Wilson has failed to do it.

THE INDIAN'S ADVANCE.
Figures recently issued by the Indian bureau indicate better days for the Red Man.

These report more Indians now in the country than at any previous time since the bureau was established. Their death rate has been reduced by a health campaign, and the birth rate is increasing. The race now owns $900,000,000 worth of property.

These figures look rather impressive, until one reflects that their wealth is in real estate handed down from the times when you bought land with Wampum. However the fact that the population is increasing shows that the Red Man is no longer pining his heart out in the country of the pale face. When he drops his war paint and feathers, and changes his name from "Peter an Bull that Lies Down" to "Peter Bull down," a metamorphosis has taken place.

The greatest obstacle in the way of the Indian's advance has been his hereditary indolence. He came by it honestly from his forefathers. Many white men feel the same way. A man of high intellectual gifts once remarked that he would rather suffer severe pain than work. You find that type in the purest Caucasian blood. And at both ends of the social scale—in the remote back country and in the specially elect of Newport and Bar Harbor.

People who are attracted to the Indian temperament speak of his qualities as a poet and a dreamer. These traits have never been popular in this country. The American people believe that poets should saw wood, however the Indian has had two qualities that are much admired among us. These are courage and endurance. The Red Man was never charged with being devoid of those traits.

In time he will make these characteristics fit in American daily life. Heroism and endurance are great qualities when they are transferred from the ambush and the war path to the corn field and the cattle ranch.

POLITICAL CANVASSING.
One usually thinks of successful political campaigning as consisting of sound and fury, speeches and automobile trips and brass bands and processions. But actually the quiet hand-picking of voters is of equal importance in bringing out a big vote.

To get a full poll a great deal of personal canvassing needs to be done. About one-fourth of the voters take little interest. They never attend rallies and they read few speeches. But if some neighbor reminds them that election day comes November 7, and by personally asks them to get out so that the local committee can make a good showing, they will do so.

The Episcopal church is actually proposing a divorce law that will make marriage a permanent residence, rather than a series of visits among your friends of the opposite sex.

It's pretty hard to beat candidates who promise to increase the appropriations for everything and at the same time lower the taxes.

The old time hero saved some one from a fire or drowning; the modern hero runs 45 yards around the other line for a touchdown.

SCENERY WAGON BREAKS LIGHTING SYSTEM POLE

The first accident to one of the new indirect lighting system standards since their installation occurred last night. A New Myers theatre scenery wagon, loaded with equipment for the production which appeared here, broke one just west of the west end of Milwaukee street bridge shortly before six o'clock. At this point a gas company crew are engaged in repairing a leaking main. The street was torn up and a great pile of dirt considerably narrowed the right driveway. The scenery wagon is wide and when the outer wheels struck the dirt pile, it slid in towards the sidewalk, struck the pole and knocked it over. It broke as it hit the sidewalk.

E. L. Howard Sells to Madden & Rae.

Dry Goods Store is Purchased by Firm Who Have Conducted Garment Department.

An evidence of rapid growth was manifested today when a business transaction was consummated whereby E. L. Howard sold his Madden & Rae dry goods store to Madden & Rae.

Madden & Rae of Chicago, opened this department about two months ago, putting in a high grade line of wearing apparel for women. Within this short time it was found that the space in Mr. Howard's store would be inadequate for their needs and Mr. Howard was persuaded to sell out entirely, giving the new firm the whole store and second floor. The purchase was made by T. J. Madden, who has been here in person for the past week.

Steps will be taken immediately to modernize the store in every way. A handsome new front, the equal of any in the city will transform the outside into a very attractive place of business.

The inside will be remodeled and redecorated. The present stock will be closed out as Madden & Rae, who are manufacturers themselves, will stock their own merchandise as far as possible. J. M. Johnson, who has been in charge of the garment department and who, with Mrs. Johnson have many friends here, will continue in the new store.

The Howard store, through Mr. Howard's efforts, has become a well-known business house in this city. It is now known at present just what he will do in the future. Whatever Mr. Howard goes into he will have the best wishes of those who know him.

Milk and Butter Fat Record Making Serve To Increase Product

Where the Champions Have Been Bred.

Ever since 1905, when a Wisconsin cow started the dairy world by producing 577 pounds of butter in a single year, dairymen in all sections of the country have been vying with each other in the fascinating pastime of milk and butter fat record breaking. Eight other cows have broken as many successive and still more remarkable records. Here is a list of these dairy queens and their records of production:

GOOD DRAFT HORSES BRING BANK DRAFTS

By A. S. ALEXANDER,

College of Agriculture of the University of Wisconsin.

Here's a true story for the mare owner to remember.

A Wisconsin farmer one day was leading his grade Belgian mare past a neighbor's place where a grade draft stallion was kept.

"Where are you going, Jim?" called the neighbor.

"I'm taking my mare to Mr. B's barn to breed her to his purebred Belgian," answered Jim.

"Huh!" said the neighbor. "Why

Wisconsin possesses all of the necessary conditions for the breeding and raising of fine horses. The 1,271 grade and scrub sires now in use prevent proper progress.

don't you save time and money by breeding to my stallion? The fee is only $10. You'll have to pay $125."

"No, sir!" said Jim. "The day I go to a stallion from home to breed to a stallion, I earn the biggest of the year."

"Then the neighbor turned away and said: 'Well, you can do as you please, of course; but I'm going to breed to my own grade horse.'"

Jim's mare in due time produced a fine foal. Mr. B. came to see it at breeding time and liked it so much that he asked the price.

"Well," said Jim, "I'm not anxious to sell, but I'd take $125."

Grade and scrub sires begot scrub horses which cost as much to raise as those from purebred sires and sell for far less money.

"Done!" cried Mr. B. "Here it is," he added, pulling out his checkbook and quickly filling in the amount with his fountain pen. "Deliver the colt at my barn the next time you come to town."

After Mr. B. left, Jim stood thinking for a while, then walked over to his neighbor's place and, finding him at home, asked:

"By the way, John, did your mare have a foal to your horse last season?"

"Sure!" answered John, "and a grand one," he added.

"Want to sell?" asked Jim.

"Yes, if I get my price, and that's $200," replied John.

Jim smiled at that and asked:

"Do you remember me passing your place one day in April a year ago and you wanting me to breed to your horse?"

"Yes," answered John; "and did your mare get a foal?" he asked.

"She certainly did," replied Jim, "and here's a check B gave me for the colt today. Pretty good wages for a day's work, eh? I made $72 by not using your horse, and you could have done as well."

After Jim had delivered the colt at B's barn next day he banked his big check and went whistling down the street, as the banker turned and said to his cashier, "Now, there's a sensible, successful business farmer!"

Reader, are you a successful business farmer? And did the draft colt you raised last season add a substantial draft to your bank account, or merely make a heavy draft on your feed bin?

Well developed, sound, high grade draft horses are needed on every farm and are in demand at remunerative prices for work in the woods and in the cities. The supply of such horses has never equaled the demand and the demand promises to be more active than ever at the end of the war. Misfit, mongrel and nondescript horses, largely the get of grade and scrub stallions, from unsuitable or unsound mares, are, always have been, and will remain "a drag on the market." Farm land is rapidly increasing in value. Feed is high in price and farm help scarce and expensive. It does not pay to produce anything but the best products possible on the farms.

The good high grade draft horse costs no more than the scrub to raise, does as much work, is in active demand and sells for much more money. Why waste time, feed and money in producing scrub horses from grade and scrub sires? Stop such foolish and ruinous practice this spring. Choose only sound, good tempered, well developed

Sudan Grass Fine Stock Feed.

Sudan grass was first tested in this country in 1908. This forage plant belongs to the sorghum family and is adapted primarily to warm climates. In the southern and southwestern states, it has been found to be an excellent forage plant. Extensive trials have been made not only at the agricultural experiment station but in connection with the members of the Agricultural Experiment association. While the seasons have not been favorable to this crop on account of the prevailing low temperatures, yields of 2.5 to 3.7 tons of hay to the acre were secured in plot tests. Since sudan grass hay is much more palatable than millet hay, this grass seems to have considerable promise as an annual forage crop for the northern states.

RENTAL OF OPEN FACED SUITS GOES UPWARD.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] New York, Nov. 3.—Joining in with the increasing cost of living, loving and dying, the cost of society is now about to advance—a dress suit combination is in the making and if put through will spell ruin to many a socially inclined but sweated gallant. Heretofore the rental of a "two-tailed tormentor and trimmings" has stood at $1.50 per night. Part of the time the owning company, when it did business wholesale, such as outfitting a group of young statesmen from the more rugged political zones for the annual hop, had to take out some of the money in program advertising. Nothing doing hereafter. "Two dollars or you boys wear your sweaters," is an epitome of the battle about of the owning firms. They have united to make good the shout.

"YOU ask what road I propose to travel?

These are the milestones which mark it.

"An Executive responsible to the whole nation.

"A Cabinet chosen from the ablest Americans.

"A foreign policy that stands courteously but firmly for American rights.

"A flag that protects the American in his lawful rights wherever his legitimate business may take him.

"A preparation for trade competition which shall protect all groups of American workmen.

"A government oversight of business which will fearlessly eliminate abuses, but will act on the assumption that the average business man is honest.

"And finally a domestic policy which looks to industrial peace, and to sound and permanent prosperity based upon the development of American trade and the building up of American industries.

"We Americans are in one boat. We cannot strike a blow at one group without injury to all. Common justice and fair play will settle our difficulties if suspicion and bitterness are let alone. These are the principles by which I propose to be guided."

AUNTIE CONCILIATED

By CATHERINE CRANMER.

"Marian, are you actually engaged to that penniless young dreamer, Gerald Holmes?" Mrs. Martyn threw this question abruptly at her niece.

"Yes, Aunt Caroline," admitted Marian, with a smile, for, although fond of her worldly aunt, she was also amused at her sometimes. "But my decision wasn't based on pennies so much as on principles. It's making money the first consideration that makes so many marriages a failure."

"Dreaming, as usual," Mrs. Martyn shook her well-groomed gray head. "Still, I hope that you'll wake up before it's too late. Come with me to the seashore and make yourself agreeable to the men you meet there."

White. Marian swam, golfed and fished in a way that misled her ambitious aunt. Gerald Holmes busily looked away on his typewriter in a manufacturing section whose labors produced the wealth which made it possible for the rich eligibles to live in luxurious idleness. Every day letters passed between Marian and Gerald and every letter contained a bit of description of the life around the water. The contrasts were so striking that Gerald got the biggest plot idea he had ever had, and he sat day after day and sometimes until far into the night, working on his first novel.

"Kindling the World's Kinship" was the title of his book, which came out early in the fall, when the summer others were returning to the city. It was the story of a millionaire mine owner, who, when he went for the first time to inspect conditions in his mines in the hope of averting a strike, was overthrown by the responsibility resting upon him in providing the means of existence for that small world of workers. With the aid of a miner and his daughter, who proved a sort of prophet and prophetess for their people, the mine owner, faced with this responsibility so frankly and discharged it so fully that life afterwards meant infinitely more for him and for the laborers and their children than any of them had dreamed that life could mean. Gerald published the book over the name of "Gerry Martyn," but covering the identity of both of them.

At Mrs. Martyn's first reception after her return to the city this book was a main topic of conversation. At Marian's request, Mrs. Martyn had invited Gerald to the reception, and he had the unusual experience of hearing his book criticized with absolute candor. He had the very uncomfortable experience, however, of seeing that John Morehead, one of the most distinguished-looking men present, was devoting himself to Marian and of seeing by Marian's manner that those attentions were not unwelcome. Gerald knew that Morehead was one of the many young married men whose marital infidelities had been aired in the newspapers, but in the midst of his anxiety over this unpleasant discovery Mrs. Martyn called him to her and presented him to Mrs. Morehead. "Everybody's discussing 'Kindling the World's Kinship,'" began Mrs. Morehead, "and as you are a writer, perhaps you'll divulge some of the tricks of the trade. I'm not the one to say whether this book is good literature, but I know it has made me shudder at the thought of the amount of money thrown away on gossaws by the few when it could be used to make life more worth living for a lot of people."

Gerald saw that the woman was intensely interested and that she was seeking to regain a normal outlook on life, but his interest in her suddenly ceased to exist as he saw Marian and John Morehead approaching them after a tête-à-tête over their tea.

"Mrs. Morehead," said Marian cordially, "this is the opportunity I've been hoping for, and I'm going to throw myself on the mercy of all three of you at the same time. To you, I have to confess an unfair monopoly of your husband all through the afternoon; to your husband, I have to confess my responsibility for some of his identical speeches being put into the mouth of the hero of 'Kindling the World's Kinship,' and to Mr. Holmes, I must confess that I have allowed the authorship of his book to become known to Mr. Morehead as the last step in proving that it was not prompted by envy of the wealthy classes."

"Mr. Holmes, forgive me for suspecting that you could envy anybody," said John Morehead gallantly, "but until a few moments ago I didn't know you were Miss Martyn's niece. I congratulate you."

"But we must keep that authorship a secret among us for a while longer," said Marian, with a blush and a laugh, as she and Gerald started away from the Moreheads, for we don't want our honeymoon spoiled by a scandalous disclosure."

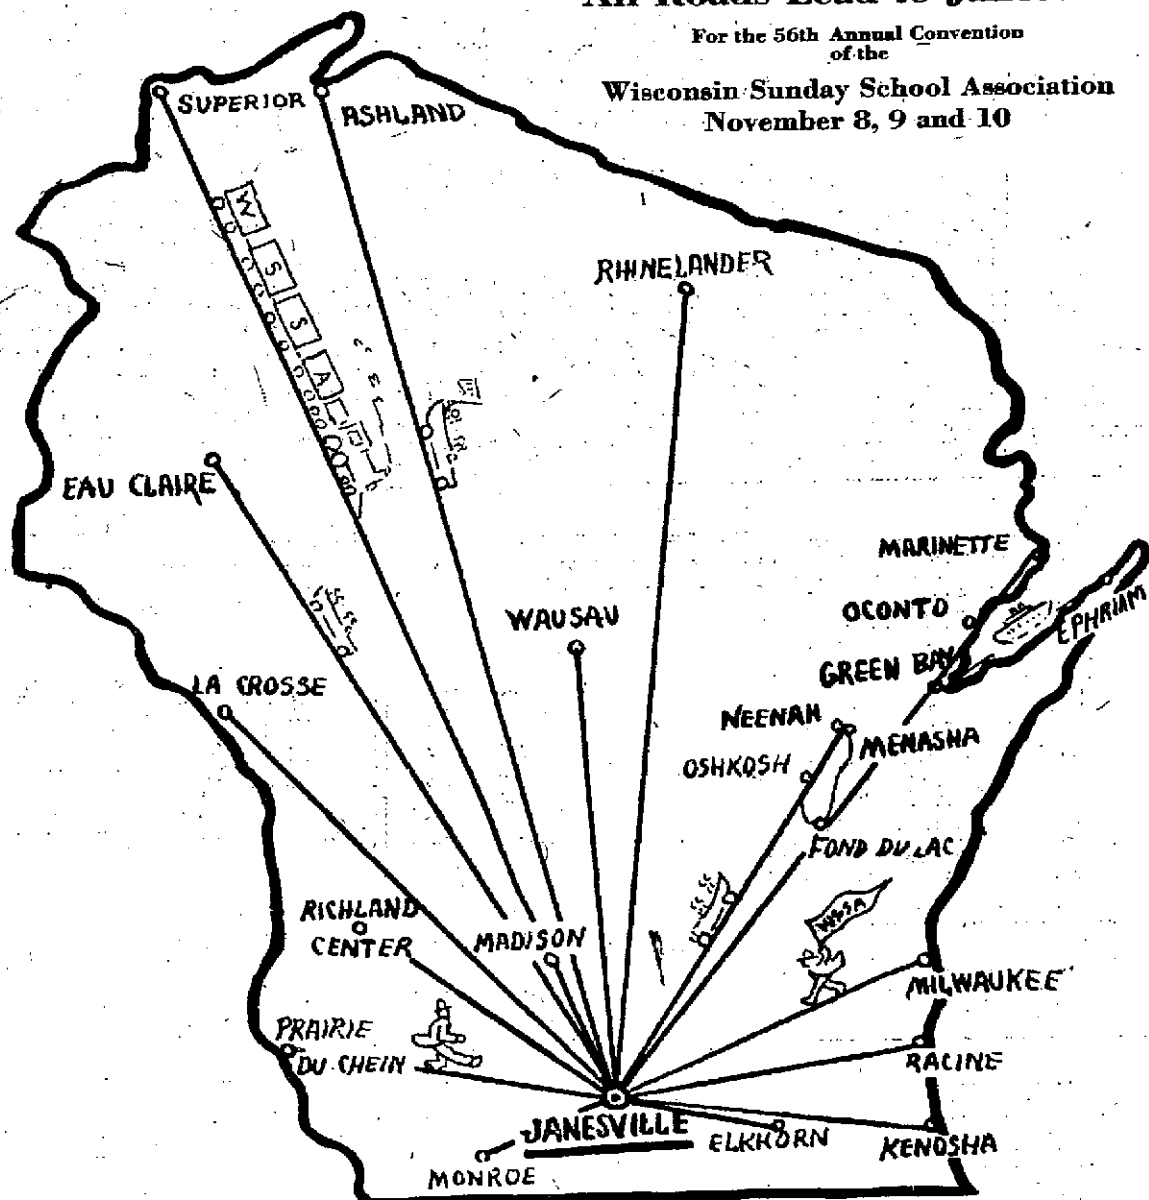

John Morehead looked into his wife's eyes and asked her if they couldn't take a little honeymoon trip to the Pennsylvania mountains where his mines were. The naughty head lowered a little, and the words that tried to form themselves on her trembling lips were less eloquent of her willingness than the glad brightness that shone through the tears in her eyes.

"Mrs. Morehead," said Marian cordially, "this is the opportunity I've been hoping for, and I'm going to throw myself on the mercy of all three of you at the same time. To you, I have to confess an unfair monopoly of your husband all through the afternoon; to your husband, I have to confess my responsibility for some of his identical speeches being put into the mouth of the hero of 'Kindling the World's Kinship,' and to Mr. Holmes, I must confess that I have allowed the authorship of his book to become known to Mr. Morehead as the last step in proving that it was not prompted by envy of the wealthy classes."

"Mr. Holmes, forgive me for suspecting that you could envy anybody," said John Morehead gallantly, "but until a few moments ago I didn't know you were Miss Martyn's niece. I congratulate you."

"But we must keep that authorship a secret among us for a while longer," said Marian, with a blush and a laugh, as she and Gerald started away from the Moreheads, for we don't want our honeymoon spoiled by a scandalous disclosure."

John Morehead looked into his wife's eyes and asked her if they couldn't take a little honeymoon trip to the Pennsylvania mountains where his mines were. The naughty head lowered a little, and the words that tried to form themselves on her trembling lips were less eloquent of her willingness than the glad brightness that shone through the tears in her eyes.

BADGERS RESPECT OHIO STATE TEAM; OFF TO COLUMBUS

Saturday Opponents Herebefore Underestimated and Wisconsin Sees Danger of Losing Battle.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Madison, Wis., Nov. 3.—Dr. Withington with his staff of coaches and thirty-five men left for Columbus yesterday afternoon and will practice there today in preparation for the game with Ohio state on Saturday. All the members of the squad are in the best of condition, with the exception of Eder, who is nursing his injured ankle. Medical authorities claim that he will be able to play against Ohio State, but will be taking chances. With this in mind, Dr. Withington has decided not to use him unless absolutely necessary. Eder Simpson has recovered from his bruises and can take his place at halfback.

Dr. Withington left Madison with plenty of hopes of winning from Ohio. He believes his men can defeat them if they play the game they are capable of doing. During the scrimmage the men have shown up especially strong. The work of the line men has been very encouraging. In the early game the main fault of the Badger backfield was traced to the fact that the line was not giving them time to get started, but since this has been remedied the halfbacks are getting at will in the scrimmage.

Olsen and Simpson will start the game as halves with Berg at fullback. Kreuz will have a chance to play during the game as his showing in the Chicago game proved that he has corrected his weakness of being unable to stop forward passing. Stark, Wahl and McCrory will take a try at half. Wisconsin can gain a sufficient lead on Wilson's team. McCrory, in the absence of Eder, has been alternating with Simpson at half, and has been showing good open field ability. McCrory won his letter last year as a quarterback, but as Taylor is directing the team in line shape, Dr. Withington is developing McCrory into a halfback. Because of the fact that the Ohio team uses practically the same color jerseys as the Badgers, the Wisconsin team will wear black ones. Although some of the men are superstitious, Dr. Withington says he has no fears of the men's ability being impaired by the change of suits.

Jack Wilcox's men have not been beaten this year and are credited with having won from several strong teams. Among their victories is the defeat of Illinois by the score of 7 to 6. Although this score shows the teams are of nearly even ability, the fact that Illinois is a strong contender proves that the Ohio State will put up a stubborn defense against Wisconsin. Illinois did not cross the Buckeye goal line during the game, but relied on Cacomber's toe to score their points. The captain of the Illinois kicked two goals and saved his team from being held scoreless.

The men who made the trip are: Captain Meyers, Olsen, Simpson, Berg, Taylor, Eder, McCrory, Wahl, Stark, Kelly, Guernsey, Koch, Gardner, Gunderson, Plitzer, Gray, Hancock, Kleck, Hefer, Carpenter, Hipke, Cramer, Wenzel, Termination, Blados, Clark, Grap, Higman, Horkey, Kio, Gove, Mueller, Owen, Schrank, Spengholz and Stark. Managers MacFadden, Funke and Schultz, and Coaches Withington, Buck, Soucy, Dougherty and King.

Veau Gregg is another one of those "lucky guys." He was wished upon the Red Sox late in 1914 by the Indians. Then his left arm lost its wiggling power and Veau did little else than nurse it for the balance of the year. In 1915 and again this spring Gregg was almost useless to his club. The main chores he performed were those of the relief variety. In 1915 he worked to a decision in only six games; this year it was five. For bats in two years Gregg got his regular salary, reported to be $5,000 a season, and two cuts of the world's series melon. That means approximately $17,000 for working about twenty hours in two years, or $850 every sixty minutes.

MUCH HINGES ON BIG NINE GAMES PLAYED SATURDAY

Badgers, Ohio State, Gophers and Illinois, Undeveloped Teams, Play Important Contests.

Games of supreme importance are to be decided in the "Big Nine" championship race tomorrow. Four undefeated eleven will go into action in what may be termed the semi-finals of the western conference season. Wisconsin will collide with Ohio State at Columbus, Minnesota will take on Illinois at Minneapolis, and Northwestern will clash with Indiana at Bloomington. Chicago will face Purdue at Chicago, but as both elevens have been twice beaten in the "Big Nine" games the contest will have no bearing on the championship.

Interest centers on the Wisconsin-Ohio State contest, as it may either go a long way towards clearing up the championship race or further complicate the situation. Neither team has been defeated and both are making strong bids for gridiron supremacy. Ohio, the youngest member of the "Big Nine," is of undoubted strength, for it trounced Illinois in its first start of the conference season and a week previously rolled up a score of 128 to 0 against Omerlin.

If Wisconsin is victorious over Ohio and Ohio State over Illinois, Badgers and Gophers will clash in Minneapolis on Nov. 18 in what will probably be the deciding game of the "Big Nine" race, as the western must defeat the eastern to win the title. In the event that Wisconsin defeats Minnesota, the Badgers must defeat Illinois on Nov. 25 to have clear claim to the honor. If the Gophers are victorious, they must triumph over Chicago in their closing battle of the season.

Critics agree that Minnesota appears to be the strongest in the conference and has brightest chance, at present, for setting away with the championship. The eleven has rolled up more than 200 points in its last four games as compared with a total of fourteen points registered by its opponents. Confidence is supreme in the Minnesota camp, for the players came out of the Iowa game a week ago without injury after scoring 67 points, and Coach Williams has built up a defense to meet the open style of play which Illinois is expected to spring. The Gophers believe they have nothing to fear from the Illinois in straight football.

Northwestern-Indiana. Northwestern is prepared for the stiffest kind of a battle from Indiana, which held the powerful Tufts eleven to a 13 to 0 score last Saturday. The Evanston eleven will be without the services of Cleland, who suffered three cracked ribs in the contest with Tufts last Saturday, and probably will be unable to play for the balance of the season. His place in the backfield will be filled by Ellingwood, a Cashin open field runner. For the first time in years Chicago has a genuine fear of Purdue. The loss of three of its first four games not only has put the Maroons hopelessly out of the championship race, but also has dampened the enthusiasm of the players. Captain Hake of the Purdue eleven will be out of the game because of a shoulder dislocation in the game against Illinois last Saturday.

Michigan is expected to pile up a safe score tomorrow against the Washington university team from St. Louis. The Wolverines, however, probably will be without the services of Quarterback Sparks, who has been out of the game this week because of an injured knee.

There is to be another comparison between eastern and central west football this week, this time on the historic field at West Point, where Notre Dame will meet the Army eleven for the third consecutive year. The 1916 team from South Bend has made an impressive early season record and has shown that Jesse Harper has built up another scoring machine. Defensively, too, the eleven has proved itself, but it has met no such offense as the Army coaches have built up around Oliphant, former Purdue star, and the Notre Dame forwards and ends will probably have their work cut out for them tomorrow. Followers of the team believe that if the defeat can stop Oliphant the Hoosiers have better than an even chance of winning.

ARMY-NOTRE DAME MEET ONCE AGAIN IN SECTIONAL FRAY

Oliphant Looked Upon This Year to Lead Soldiers to Victory.

Elmer Oliphant, that enterprising young man who is learning how to be a United States army officer as a side line to his football studies, will be swathed in the calcium again tomorrow afternoon when the Army "tank" is turned loose against the rearing fresh westerners from Indiana, Notre Dame. The South Bend school is going all the way to West Point to try to batter out another victory over the Army and the majority of critics expect they will do it, Oliphant or no Oliphant.

That is the east's only big game. All this section will be taking on opponents who should prove comparisons. Dartmouth alone has a hard job on her hands, and there is everything to indicate another dent will be put in the Green chances when it is capitulated against the heavy Syracuse footballists. The game will be played at Springfield, Conn. Princeton will have Bucknell for practice. Harvard will battle Virginia, and Yale will take on Colgate, not a practice game by any means, but one which should be won by Yale. Cornell will get Carnegie Tech, the team which was battered by Yale.

MORRIS MILLER

The state department of the Cuban republic received official notice from its minister in Paris, Dr. Rafael Martinez Ortiz, that at a meeting of the Olympic games committee in Paris it was decided the contests of 1920 will be held in Havana, provided governmental arrangements and preliminary details can be terminated successfully. Some eight months ago Major Freyre de Andrada wrote to the committee in charge of the games and proposed that the next meet be held in the Cuban capital. A delegate was sent to Cuba and carefully examined what Havana had to offer for such a contest, and his report evidently impressed the commission favorably. President Menocal has named a committee to formulate guarantees and plans, and they will meet with the authorities in a few days to decide what answer shall be sent to the international Olympic committee. It is declared that the answer will be satisfactory.

Fanatics at Ebbets field during the third game of the world series were surprised to see Jake Daubert, prior to game time, rush over to a field box and make as though to strike Daubert on the right side of the head. The man with the high forehead made no resistance, and the watchman saw that Jake was lovingly rubbing his bat over that bald spot. No explanation of this extraordinary action was asked or given until the game was over, and Daubert had made three hits in four times at bat. Then it was discovered that the bald head came from Minersville, Pa. (Jake's home town), in company with a large delegation of Daubert's friends from the same place. His name is John Geier, and despite his bald head he is a young man and an enthusiastic rooter for Jake Daubert.

Leland Stanford university will have illustrated lectures as an integral part of athletic training. This is an upward step in the idea of course of instruction for athletics inaugurated by Rice Templeton last year in connection with track and field instruction. Photographs of champions past and present in action, and moving pictures taken on the college campus will be used.

Guy Dunlap, a recruit third baseman, who will report to Pittsburgh Nationals next spring, is regarded by Manager Callahan as a real find. Dunlap played in a trolley league with St. James, Mo., last season and had a batting record of .500 in fifty games. His record is filled with extra base hits.

The first thing Bill Carrigan did when he got to his home in Lewiston, Me., was to buy control of the stock of a national bank and he will become an official of the institution and learn the banking game.

Rumor has it that Jack Egan, former American league umpire, will purchase the Providence International league club, which is again on the market. If Egan should buy he would act as his own manager.

One of the early announcements of changes to be made in the Phillies is that Moran will dispose of Pitchers Bender, Chalmers and McQuillan. Fans almost had forgotten that the last two named were with the team.
